The Gabriel-Glas History

Our Vision: Necessity is the Mother of Invention

Often choosing the right glass is more difficult than choosing the right wine. What is more important to the wine connoisseur?

A cupboard full of glasses or a cellar full of wine?

Pessimists are ostracized because in this case they describe the glass as half full rather than half empty. Optimists would never fill a wine glass half full. The modern way to optimally enjoy the intense taste of wine lies in the small quantities. The wine in the glass should be presented optimally.

At home almost every wine connoisseur has an arsenal of many different glasses.

Motto: Better too many glasses than too few!

And as creatures of habit we usually use the same glass anyway. Thus – without even noticing it – we all select our own favorite glass. The rest of them, mostly large glasses are just there for show.

In my 30-year career as a wine connoisseur I have tasted tens of thousands of wines. In many forms: on tap, at wine cellars all over the world, at rare wine tastings, at public events, at wine tasting parties and of course at private residences. Although the standards for glasses have improved in the recent past, in many cases I would have preferred a «better glass». Because as soon as there are many people taking part in a wine tasting where many wines are presented quite often substandard glasses are used and this decreases the enjoyment of the wine.
